

amNY.com
WEDNESDAY,
March 6, 2013

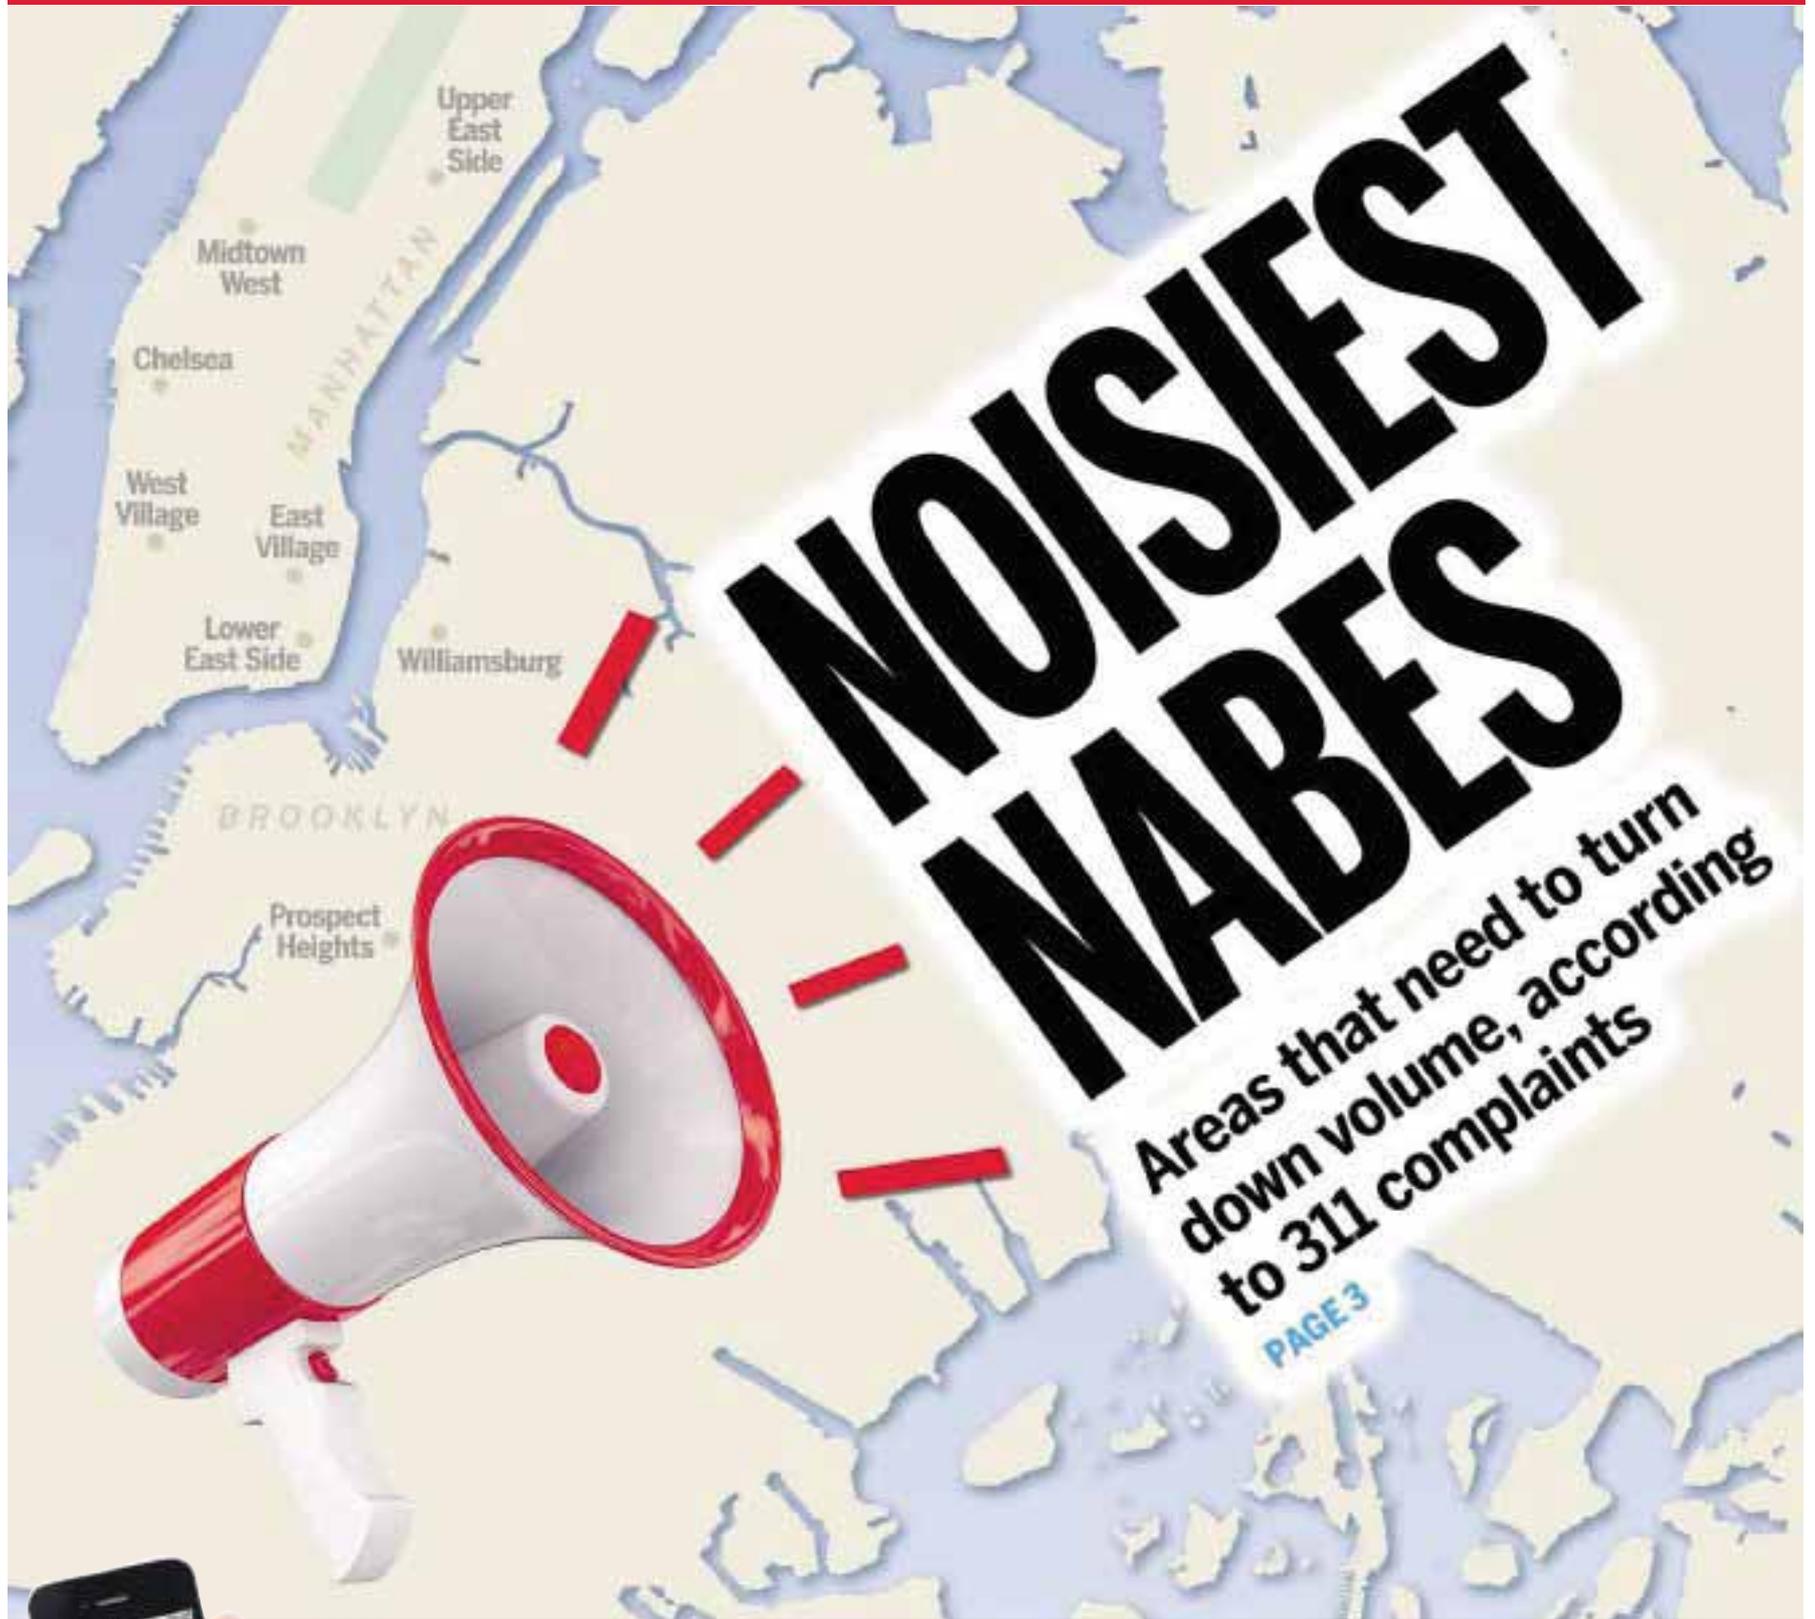

10th Anniversary

am NEWYORK

HI 40° LO 32°
Rain/snow/wind

MANHATTAN'S HIGHEST DAILY CIRCULATION NEWSPAPER

We're mobile too!

Get amNewYork on your iPad,
iPhone, Android or Kindle

SCAN THIS TAG TO GET THE APP

Stewart taking 'Daily Show' break to direct

Jon Stewart is leaving "The Daily Show" — for three months — to direct a movie.

The political satirist and media critic, 50, will take a hiatus from his Comedy Central talk show this summer to make his feature directing debut, adapting Maziar Bahari's book "Then They Came for Me: A Family's Story of Love, Captivity and Survival."

The book, co-written with Aimee Molloy, chronicles Bahari's attempt to cover Iran's presidential elections in 2009. The BBC journalist ended up arrested, imprisoned and tortured in an infamous Iranian lockup.

Stewart, who often ridicules his own acting in such films as "Death to Smoochy" and "Half-Baked," adapted the book.

The exact dates of Stewart's

Jon Stewart

hiatus have yet to be finalized but he will miss eight weeks of original episodes.

British comedian John Oliver, 35, who is also a correspondent on the Emmy-winning series, will fill in as host.

The movie will be budgeted at less than $10 million and produced by highly regarded Scott Rudin and Gigi Pritzker, according to two people familiar with the production. (MCT/REUTERS)

Stunning 'Admission'

Tina Fey at a screening for her upcoming movie "Admission" yesterday in Manhattan. The film hits theaters on March 22.

The city's loudest nabes

BY TIM HERRERA
tim.herrera@am-ny.com

Looking for some peace and quiet? Stay out of the East Village, the Lower East Side and Williamsburg.

Those three neighborhoods are the noisiest in New York City, with 2,108 noise complaints coming from the East Village over the last year, according to an amNewYork analysis of 311 data.

The Lower East Side is the second-noisiest area in the city, with 2,069 complaints, and the perennial noisemakers in Williamsburg are No. 3 with 2,061.

The vast majority of complaints from the past 12 months in all three areas came from restaurants, bars, and parties in apartments, and the vibrant nightlife that permeates the areas is both a blessing and curse for residents, experts said.

"People are coming in from all around the world to go out to our restaurants and experience our nightlife, so it's about finding the right balance where businesses and residents can work and live together harmoniously," said Andrew Rigie, executive director of the New York City Hospitality Alliance.

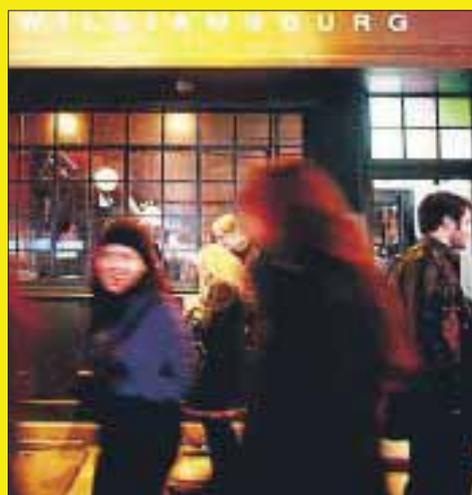

"These areas with the most complaints are hot spots for dining and nightlife and attract New Yorkers and out-of-towners, which makes for a very high concentration of people, so of course there's a higher concentration of people in the street who could generate complaints," he said.

Rigie added that restaurants in these areas are conscious of the residents' complaints and have "invested thousands and thousands of dollars in soundproof walls" and often work with "sound consultants."

HOLD YOUR EARS HERE!

NOISIEST It seems like there's always some action on East Village streets.

IN THE RUNNING In Williamsburg, bring some earplugs.

Here are the 10 noisiest neighborhoods in New York, according to the number of 311 noise complaints from March 2012 to March 2013:

1. East Village 2,108
2. Lower East Side 2,069
3. Williamsburg 2,061
4. Washington Heights 2,007
5. East Village/Stuy Town 1,953
6. Midtown West 1,863
7. Upper West Side 1,600
8. Murray Hill 1,564
9. Prospect Heights 1,532
10. West Village 1,513

WHAT'S THAT RACKET?

The most common noise gripes over the past year in the East Village

1. Loud music or party: 804
2. Loud talking: 253
3. Construction before or after hours: 244
4. Construction equipment: 166
5. Noise from air condition or ventilation equipment: 129

(TIM HERRERA)

Susan Stetzer, district manager of Community Board 3, which oversees the East Village, said the area has had the most complaints "for many years" and that it's "nothing new."

Still, some residents said the noise is too much.

"I've lived all around New York, uptown, downtown and all sorts of places, but this neighborhood has the weirdest noise," said Brian Lelder, 35, who lives on East First Street.

"We live in the back [of the apartment building] and high up, but we can still hear everything," he said, adding that the area is the loudest he's ever lived in.

Only two Brooklyn nabes cracked the top 10 — Williamsburg and Prospect Heights — but residents in those areas still had plenty to kvetch about.

"Before it was a lot of noise from gang fights. Now it's the bars and restaurants. Now it's parties," said Raul Hernandez, 52, who lives on South 2nd Street in Williamsburg.

Still, Rigie said more sound complaints can often signal healthier growth in the hospitality industry, which is always good for the areas and the city.

"The industry has done so much to grow some neighborhoods that were once perceived as undesirable, and turned them into desirable areas to live in," he said. (WITH ANNA SANDERS)

FBI checking pilot's report of drone during JFK airport landing

The FBI yesterday was investigating a pilot's report that an unmanned aircraft came within 200 feet of the passenger plane he was landing at Kennedy Airport. Investigators from the FAA sought information after the pilot reported the drone sighting at 1:15 p.m. Monday, said FAA spokesman Jim Peters.

"He saw a small, unmanned or remote-controlled aircraft while on final approach to Runway 31," the FAA said in a statement. It was described as black and 3 feet wide at most, with four propellers, the FBI said. (REUTERS)

Aircraft was described as black and 3 feet wide.